

THE MONROE NEWS

Temperance girl adds TV show to her dancing career

Quinn Starner of Temperance participated in this season's television production of "So You Think You Can Dance."

Quinn Starner of Temperance (Courtesy photo)

Posted Jun. 28, 2016 at 6:00 PM

Quinn Starner of Temperance participated in this season's television production of "So You Think You Can Dance."

She is a student at Company C Dance Club and Toledo Ballet, where she has been studying ballet along with contemporary, lyrical, jazz, modern, tap and hip hop dance styles. Her performances with Toledo Ballet include many years with The Nutcracker; and also in the studio's production of Alice in Wonderland.

In 2014, she performed in the Christmas Spectacular with the Rockettes; and in 2015, she was a junior first runner-up at The Dance Awards in Las Vegas. She competed at Youth America Grand Prix for the last three years as a soloist where she has won awards; she was also accepted into American Ballet Theater in New York City with a full scholarship.

"So You Think You Can Dance," a Fox series, features youth ages 9-13 in a dance competition. Video clips and episodes can be found at www.fox.com/so-you-think-you-can-dance.

On the TV show, Quinn was included in a montage on the "callbacks" episode that aired June 27.